

BUNGALOWER

Covering Orlando's Bungalow Neighborhoods

Main Menu

Search

Sign up for the Bungalower
EVENTS Newsletter.

Become A Bungalower Get the Envelope

Learn More

New Office Building in North Quarter to Break Ground This Month

By Matthew Erolfman | February 4, 2014 | Neighborhood: Uptown | Topic: Buildings

A new office building in the North Quarter is scheduled to break ground later this month.

The new building is located at 800 N Orange Ave [GMap] next to the Park North at Cheney Place condos.

Bungalower has learned that a company affiliated with developer Craig Ustler closed on the property late last week and that construction will begin later this month.

The building is a four-story 21,900 square foot office building with ground floor parking and additional parking on the side and behind the building.

Ustler says that the building is already 100% leased to three office tenants.

Here's a look at some of the renderings and site plan that were included in the submission back in August last year.

